

Processed AI Transcription

Background, Present Living Situation, Significant Events, and Contingency Plan

A short narrative of the person's background

The person mentioned in the text is experiencing challenges in managing various daily tasks around the house and in personal care. They have noticed difficulties with tasks that used to come easily to them, such as keeping the house organized, staying on top of laundry, maintaining the garden, and preparing meals. They also mention increased effort required for personal grooming, settling in at night, and managing medications and health issues. Despite being independent by nature, they are starting to realize that they may need additional support to handle these tasks that are becoming overwhelming. It is important for them to maintain their independence while seeking assistance when necessary.

Current living situation etc

The person mentioned in the text is experiencing challenges in managing daily tasks and activities around the house. They are finding it increasingly difficult to stay on top of household chores and maintaining their living space. Tasks such as laundry, gardening, meal preparation, and personal grooming have become more overwhelming. Furthermore, they have noticed changes in their ability to care for themselves, including difficulty in getting ready in the morning and settling in at night. The person also mentions needing assistance with managing medications and health problems. Despite their independent nature, they have acknowledged the need for some support to address the tasks that have become overwhelming while striving to maintain their independence.

Communication

Ability to express core needs Verbal or Non-Verbal

Issues related to the ability to express core needs verbally or non-verbally have been identified in the text. The person mentioned is struggling with managing everyday tasks around the house, including keeping up with laundry, maintaining the garden and yard, and preparing meals. They have also noticed challenges in personal self-care activities such as bathing, dressing, grooming, and managing medications. Additionally, the individual mentions needing more time to settle in at night and experiencing difficulties with getting comfortable and feeling rested. Despite being independent, the individual acknowledges that they may need support with tasks that are becoming overwhelming.

Can read/write?

No information found.

Can use a phone?

No information found.

Receptive / Expressive skills?

The person mentioned in the text is experiencing challenges with various daily tasks around the house, self-care routines, and managing personal responsibilities. They have noticed a decline in their ability to handle chores like laundry, maintaining the garden, and meal preparation. Furthermore, they are finding it harder to maintain personal grooming, settle in at night, and manage tasks related to medications and health care. The individual acknowledges the need for support and assistance, even though they have always valued their independence. Their narrative suggests difficulties with both receptive and expressive skills in various aspects of daily living.

Sensory and Speech difficulties

Blind or nearly blind

No information found.

Deaf or nearly deaf

No information found.

Hearing impaired

No information found.

Speech impaired

It appears that based on the text provided, there is no specific mention of any issues related to speech impairment. Therefore, no information related to speech impairment was found in the text.

Vision impaired

No information found.

Mobility

Driving

No information found.

Falling or history of falling

The person mentioned in the text does not specifically mention any issues related to falling or a history of falling.

Getting up after falling

The person mentioned may not have a specific issue related to getting up after falling, but they are experiencing challenges with everyday tasks and self-care activities. This includes difficulties with managing household chores, cooking, personal grooming, settling in at night, and needing help with medications. They are struggling to maintain their independence and are considering seeking support to address these tasks that have become overwhelming.

Moving around in the community

The individual mentioned has difficulties with daily tasks around the house, such as moving around, staying on top of cleaning, laundry, managing the garden, and preparing meals. Additionally, they struggle with personal care activities like grooming, bathing, and dressing, as well as settling in at night and managing medications. While they value their independence, they recognize the need for extra support with tasks that are becoming overwhelming.

Moving around inside home

The person mentioned in the text is experiencing difficulties with moving around inside the home. They used to handle tasks like moving from room to room, keeping things clean and in order, managing the laundry, and maintaining the garden. However, they have noticed that these tasks have become more challenging, with things slipping through the cracks and feeling overwhelmed by the everyday responsibilities. Slight changes in daily activities like cooking, personal grooming, and settling in at night have become more effortful as well. They are open to seeking support to help manage these tasks that are starting to feel overwhelming, all while trying to maintain their independence.

Moving Around Outside home

The person mentioned is experiencing challenges with moving around outside the home. They used to manage fine on their own with everyday tasks but are now finding it harder to keep up. Tasks like handling laundry, maintaining the garden, cooking meals, and even taking care of personal grooming have become more difficult and require extra effort. They have realized the need for support and assistance, especially with tasks that are starting to feel overwhelming, in order to maintain their independence.

Transfers, wheelchair to car or bed to chair

No information found.

Two or one assistance for all transfers

The person mentioned in the text is experiencing difficulties managing everyday tasks around the house and personal care. They are finding it challenging to keep up with various tasks such as household chores, meal preparation, grooming, and even settling in at night. They have noticed changes in their ability to handle these tasks and are feeling overwhelmed trying to maintain their independence. The individual acknowledges the need for support in areas where they are struggling, such as managing medications and dealing with health issues. They express a desire for assistance to help them navigate these challenges while still preserving their independence as much as possible.

Using arms, hands, or fingers

No information found.

Using transport as a passenger

No information found.

Wheelchair user

The person mentioned in the text is experiencing difficulties with various everyday tasks and activities around the house. They are finding it challenging to keep up with housework, gardening, meal preparation, personal grooming, medication management, and overall self-care. The individual acknowledges the increasing struggle with these tasks and expresses a need for additional support to maintain their independence while managing the tasks that are becoming overwhelming.

Household Management

Faecal smearing

No information found.

Administering personal finances

Issues related to managing personal finances are not explicitly mentioned in the text. Therefore, there is no information found regarding any difficulties related to administering personal finances.

Garden / lawns

The person mentioned in the text is struggling with everyday tasks and responsibilities around the house. They are finding it challenging to keep up with tasks such as laundry, keeping the garden and yard in good shape, and meal preparation. Additionally, they are noticing changes in taking care of themselves, from grooming to settling in at night. They also mention needing help with managing medications and health problems. Overall, they are realizing that they may need support with tasks that are becoming overwhelming, despite being independent in the past. No information found related to Garden/lawns.

Home safety

The person mentioned seems to be experiencing challenges with everyday tasks around the house due to feeling overwhelmed by the increasing demands. They are struggling with managing tasks such as house cleaning, laundry, yard work, meal preparation, personal grooming, and settling in at night. The individual has also mentioned needing help with managing medications and health problems. Although they prefer being independent, they are acknowledging the need for support to manage tasks that have become overwhelming. This situation indicates potential issues related to home safety.

Laundry

Yes, the person mentioned is having issues related to laundry. They used to be on top of the laundry, making sure the house was safe and sorted, but lately, they've noticed it's harder to stay on track with it all.

Operating home heating appliances

No information found.

Meal preparation

Yes, the person mentioned in the text is experiencing difficulties with meal preparation. They mentioned that cooking has become challenging, not just the act of cooking itself, but also the planning, shopping, and making sure they have all the necessary ingredients. This has been causing frustration and leading to tasks piling up due to a lack of energy to pull everything together.

Shopping for necessary items

The person mentioned is struggling with everyday tasks and finding it harder to keep up with chores around the house. This includes difficulties in managing the laundry, maintaining the garden or yard, preparing meals, and taking care of personal grooming. They have noticed changes in their ability to handle daily activities, such as getting ready in the morning and settling in at night. Although they prefer to be independent, they are starting to realize that they may need some support, especially with tasks that are becoming overwhelming.

Other housework

The person mentioned is having difficulties with various housework tasks and day-to-day activities. These challenges include managing household chores like laundry, keeping the garden and yard maintained, cooking meals, planning and shopping for groceries, and taking care of personal grooming and hygiene. They are also experiencing challenges with daily routines such as getting ready in the morning, settling in at night, and managing medications and health problems. Despite being independent, they acknowledge the need for additional support to handle the tasks that are becoming overwhelming. No information found.

Self-care

Bathing, showering, Washing self

The person mentioned is starting to realize that they need more help around the house and in various areas. They used to be able to manage everyday tasks on their own, but now things have become more challenging. Simple tasks like taking care of themselves, including bathing, dressing, and grooming, have started to require more effort and feel like bigger tasks. Getting ready in the morning and settling in at night are also taking more time and effort. Additionally, the person sometimes needs extra help with managing medications and dealing with health problems. Overall, they are finding certain personal tasks related to self-care more difficult and are open to receiving support to maintain their independence.

Bed mobility

Based on the text provided, there is no specific mention of issues related to bed mobility. The person discusses challenges with daily tasks, managing the house and yard, cooking, personal care, settling in at night, and needing extra help with various aspects of their life. No information found regarding bed mobility issues.

Dressing and / or undressing

The person mentioned in the text is experiencing difficulties with everyday tasks around the house and self-care. They are finding challenges in managing tasks that were once easy for them, such as keeping the house clean, maintaining the garden, preparing meals, and taking care of their personal grooming. The individual is noticing that simple activities like getting ready in the morning, bathing, dressing, and grooming are requiring more effort and time. They are also struggling with getting comfortable at night, sleeping well, and needing assistance with managing medications and health issues. Despite being independent, the person acknowledges the need for support to handle tasks that are becoming overwhelming.

Eating and drinking

No information found.

Faecal smearing

No information found.

Grooming and caring for body parts

The person mentioned in the text has been experiencing challenges with simple tasks and daily activities, such as managing household chores, cooking, and self-care routines. They are noticing that tasks like grooming, dressing, and maintaining personal hygiene are requiring more effort than before, and even basic activities like getting ready in the morning have become more challenging. This individual is also facing difficulties in settling in at night and has mentioned needing help with personal matters like managing medications and dealing with health issues. They express a desire to remain independent but acknowledge the need for support with tasks that are becoming overwhelming.

Managing / preventing health problems

The person mentioned in the text is experiencing challenges with managing daily tasks independently. They are finding it increasingly difficult to keep up with household chores, such as laundry, gardening, and meal preparation. They have also noticed changes in their self-care routine, finding tasks like bathing, dressing, and grooming more demanding than before. In addition, the individual has mentioned needing help with managing medications and dealing with health issues. While they value their independence, they have acknowledged the need for some support with tasks that have become overwhelming.

Managing medication

The person mentioned in the text is facing challenges in managing various daily tasks around the house. They have noticed difficulties in keeping up with household chores like laundry and maintaining the garden, as well as in preparing meals due to lack of energy and organization. Additionally, personal tasks such as grooming, dressing, and settling in at night have become more effortful. The individual also mentions needing help with managing medications and addressing health issues, indicating potential struggles in this area as well. Overall, they are coming to terms with the need for support in handling tasks that have become overwhelming while striving to maintain their independence.

Menstrual management

No information found.

Night Care

Yes, the person mentioned in the text is experiencing difficulties related to Night Care. They have mentioned needing more time to settle in at night, experiencing trouble getting comfortable, waking up needing help or feeling unrested, and requiring extra assistance with personal matters at night, such as managing medications or dealing with health issues.

Night settling

The person mentioned seems to be facing difficulties with various aspects of daily life, such as managing household chores, cooking meals, personal grooming, and settling in at night. They have noticed changes in the time needed to get comfortable at night, waking up feeling unrested at times, and requiring extra help with personal tasks, including managing medications. These challenges are adding up and making it harder for them to keep up with everyday tasks that used to be more manageable. They are open to seeking support and assistance to help maintain their independence while managing tasks that are becoming overwhelming.

Toileting

No information found.

Continence

Faecal continence

No information found.

Urinary continence

No information found.

Behaviour

Harm to others, Mood and emotion (anxiety, depression, unstable mood. etc)

The person mentioned in the text is facing challenges managing everyday tasks like household chores, gardening, meal preparation, personal grooming, and settling in at night. They are finding it increasingly difficult to keep up with these activities and are noticing changes in how they care for themselves. Despite their independent nature, they are beginning to recognize the need for additional support with tasks that are becoming overwhelming in order to maintain their independence. Details related to Mood and emotion: The person expresses frustration and feelings of struggle in managing tasks that were once simple for them. They mention needing more time to settle in at night, experiencing difficulties with personal care tasks, and feeling overwhelmed by daily responsibilities. These observations suggest a potential impact on their mood and emotional well-being.

Motivation

The person mentioned in the text is experiencing challenges with everyday tasks such as household chores, meal preparation, personal care, and managing medications. These tasks have become more difficult and overwhelming for them to handle independently, leading to a realization that they may need additional support. They express a desire to maintain their independence but acknowledge the need for assistance to manage tasks that are becoming increasingly burdensome.

Property damage

No information found.

Repetitive

The person mentioned in the text is experiencing difficulties with managing daily tasks and activities that were once easy for them. They are finding it challenging to keep up with household chores, such as laundry and gardening, as well as with meal preparation. Simple self-care tasks like bathing, dressing, and grooming now require more effort and time. Additionally, settling in at night and managing personal health matters have become more burdensome. The individual acknowledges the need for support and assistance with tasks that are becoming overwhelming, despite their usual independence.

Routine

The person mentioned in the text is experiencing difficulties with maintaining their daily routine and managing everyday tasks. They have noticed challenges in keeping up with household chores, such as laundry and yard work, as well as in tasks like cooking and personal grooming. Additionally, they are finding it harder to settle in at night and are needing more assistance with personal care and health management. Despite their desire for independence, they are recognizing a need for support in certain areas to alleviate feelings of being overwhelmed.

Self-harming

No information found.

Sleep and night behaviour (insomnia, excessive sleep, etc)

Yes, the person mentioned in the text has experienced changes related to sleep and night behavior. They have noticed needing more time to settle in at night, finding it harder to get comfortable, sometimes waking up in the middle of the night needing help, and not feeling as rested. This suggests potential issues with sleep quality and nighttime routines.

Socially inappropriate,

No information found.

Unsafe wandering

Issues related to Unsafe wandering may be present. The person mentioned seems to be struggling with everyday tasks that were once manageable, such as navigating around the house and keeping things in order. They mention finding it harder to stay on top of tasks like laundry, maintaining the garden, and meal preparation. Additionally, there are challenges in self-care activities like grooming, dressing, and settling in at night, as well as managing medications and health problems. While they value their independence, they acknowledge the need for assistance to handle tasks that are becoming overwhelming.

Withdrawn

The person described in the text is experiencing difficulties with managing everyday tasks around the house and self-care. They are struggling with keeping up with chores, including laundry and yard work, and find it challenging to plan and prepare meals. Additionally, they mention needing more time and effort for basic self-care activities like bathing, dressing, and grooming. The individual also expresses some struggle with settling in at night and may require help with managing medications and health issues. Although they are used to being independent, they acknowledge the need for support with tasks that are becoming overwhelming while aiming to maintain their independence.

Memory / Cognition

Attention

The person in the text does not exhibit any explicit signs or mention of issues related to attention.

Intellectual ability

Yes, the person mentioned in the text is facing challenges related to cognitive functioning and daily tasks. They are struggling with managing household chores, keeping up with everyday tasks, meal preparation, personal grooming, and overall self-care. The individual is finding it increasingly difficult to maintain their independence and is considering the need for additional support with these tasks.

Memory

The text does not contain any specific information related to memory.

Orientation

The individual mentioned in the text is experiencing difficulties with various tasks related to daily living, such as household chores, meal preparation, personal grooming, and managing medications. These challenges are making it harder for them to maintain their usual level of independence. Despite their preference for being independent, they are starting to realize that they may need some support with these tasks to alleviate the feelings of overwhelm and to retain their autonomy as much as possible.

Learning ability / Problem solving

The person mentioned in the text is experiencing difficulties with managing everyday tasks around the house and with personal care activities. These challenges include struggles with household chores, meal preparation, self-care routines, and overall maintenance of the home and yard. They also mention needing more time and effort to complete tasks that were once effortless, as well as feeling the need for additional help with managing medications and health issues. The individual expresses a desire to maintain their independence while acknowledging the need for support with tasks that are becoming overwhelming.

Supervision

Daily prompts

The person mentioned seems to be facing challenges with daily tasks and activities around the house. They are struggling to keep up with tasks that used to come easily to them, such as household chores, gardening, meal preparation, personal grooming, and managing medications. Despite their independent nature, they are recognizing the need for additional support to maintain their independence. They are finding it difficult to manage the increasing demands of these everyday tasks and would appreciate some assistance, especially with tasks that are starting to become overwhelming.

Needs 24-hour supervision

No information found.

Some, for safety

The person mentioned seems to be experiencing difficulties with managing various tasks around the house and with personal care. They are finding it harder to keep up with everyday tasks, such as housework, gardening, meal preparation, grooming, and settling in for the night. Additionally, they are facing challenges with personal care, including bathing, dressing, and managing medications. While they are used to being independent, they acknowledge the need for support to maintain their independence and manage tasks that are becoming overwhelming.

Recreational and Social

Community participation

The person mentioned is experiencing difficulties in managing everyday tasks and self-care. They are finding it challenging to keep up with household chores, cooking, personal grooming, and settling in at night. They acknowledge the need for more support and assistance, even though they have been independent in the past. It seems like they may benefit from some help with tasks that have become overwhelming for them.

Educational support

No information found.

Specialist Teachers

The person mentioned in the text seems to be experiencing difficulties in managing everyday tasks such as housework, cooking, personal care, and health maintenance. Tasks that were once manageable are now feeling overwhelming and exhausting. They are struggling with keeping up with laundry, maintaining the house and garden, meal planning and preparation, personal grooming, settling in at night, and managing medications and health issues. Despite being independent, they are realizing they may need some support to handle these tasks that are becoming increasingly challenging.

Family life

The person mentioned is experiencing challenges with managing everyday tasks in their home and personal care. They are finding it increasingly difficult to keep up with housework, cooking, and self-care activities. Simple tasks that were once easy for them, such as laundry, gardening, cooking, and getting ready in the morning, now feel like more significant efforts. They are also struggling with getting comfortable at night and may need help with medications and health issues. Despite their independence, they are recognizing the need for support and assistance with tasks that have become overwhelming.

Socialization

The person mentioned in the text is experiencing difficulties in managing everyday tasks around the house and personal care. There is a sense of overwhelm with tasks like keeping the house clean, doing laundry, maintaining the garden, cooking meals, and taking care of personal hygiene. They have also mentioned struggles with settling in at night, managing medications, and dealing with health issues, indicating a need for additional support. While they acknowledge their independence, they are beginning to accept that they may need help with tasks that are becoming overwhelming.

Vocational support

The person mentioned in the text is experiencing difficulties in managing daily tasks around the house, such as cleaning, laundry, garden maintenance, meal preparation, personal grooming, and settling in at night. They are finding these tasks increasingly challenging and in need of support. While they value their independence and have always been independent, they are realizing that they may require assistance with these overwhelming tasks.